A Cure for Pneumonia.

The Rocky Mountain News says:—Why do they let people die of pneumonia when the following simple remedy has saved not only myself, but all who have had a chance to use it?

A friend of mine, Francis Henry P. Loomis, professor of medicine at Cornell University, died with pneumonia last Christmas, and all his associates' knowledge could not save him, hence my warning and advice, and I hereby challenge any doctor in the United States to come forward and contradict me. I am ready to defend this remedy as an absolute cure for pneumonia, even in the last stages.

Saturate a ball of cotton as large as a one-inch marble, with spirits of alcohol, and three drops of chloroform. Take each ball of cotton, place it between the patient's teeth, and let him inhale the fumes in deep long breaths for fifteen minutes; then, rest for fifteen minutes, or longer, if needed; then inhale again fifteen minutes, and repeat the operation as directed for twenty-four times, and the result will be that the lungs will expand to their normal condition, and in twenty-four hours the patient is out of danger, and in forty-eight hours he is cured—although weak.

Cotton should be changed twice in fifteen minutes.

Another method of inhalation for elderly people without teeth, and patients in last stages of pneumonia: Get a small alcohol lamp, or any other heating apparatus, and a porcelain cup, make a one-inch thick cover of wood for cup—put four small nails under the cover to prevent sliding off; bore a one-half-inch hole in middle and insert in the cover a one-half-inch rubber tube long enough to reach patient's mouth, then boil alcohol diluted with water 5 per cent, or plain, half and half (no chloroform used in this method) and let patient inhale through tube the fumes of the boiling alcohol in deep long breaths for fifteen minutes, and follow directions above and I can assure you that you will disappoint the undertaker, and live many happy days.

But listen, do not wait until you get pneumonia, but use this simple remedy as soon as you feel that your lungs are afflicted. Give this cure to all with whom you come in contact, it is safe and reliable.

Doctors, try it, and use it for humanity's sake, and the public for your own welfare. But this cure may come handy some time. Respectfully
MARIUS A. REDDING,
A Student of Human Nature.

Rheumatism Cannot Be Cured Unless Uric-O is Used

Sudden Death, Heart Failure and Paralysis are Caused by Poisonous Uric and Rheumatic Acids.

The Rheumatic person is skeptical regarding the claims of almost any remedy advertised as a cure for Rheumatism and one can scarcely blame him for being so. All the plasters and liniments combined never actually cured a case of Rheumatism. They may relieve it in one quarter but it is sure to break out somewhere else. The only true way to cure Rheumatism is to drive it from the system, for as long as the Uric and Rheumatic Acid remains in the blood, one is never entirely free from the trouble. Uric-O does this. It is harmless and drives it out of the system. It is composed of perfect antidotes for the rheumatic acid poison in the system, and the secret of its wonderful success lies in the fact that it is designed to cure Rheumatism only.

Uric-O is sold at Noyes Drug Store at 75c and $1.00 the bottle. A liberal sample may be procured by writing to the Smith Drug Co., 208 Smith Bldg., Syracuse N. Y.

Failure Not a Disgrace.

What an unfortunate thing that the idea should be dinned into the ear of youth everywhere, that it is a disgrace to fail—that is, to fail to make money, to accumulate property.

It is not a disgrace to fail; but it is a disgrace not to do one's level best to succeed. "Not failure, but low aim is crime."

Multitudes of poor people to-day who are not known outside of their own little communities are really great successes when measured by all that makes true greatness—their heroic endeavors, their brave battle for years with obstacles, playing a losing game with heroism.

Their great patience and wonderful self-control under the criticism of those who do not understand them are evidences that they have succeeded. The possession of a noble character is the greatest evidence in the world that one has succeeded.

On the other hand, if a man has gotten a fortune, but has left his manhood on the way to it; if he has bartered his good name in the process of getting it; he is still a failure, no matter how much money he may have accumulated.

A clean record is the greatest kind of a success. And how few men who make big fortunes manage to save their good name, to keep their record clean!

The mere possession of money may be no evidence whatever that a man has succeeded. If he can not control himself; if his aims are low and vulgar; if he is greedy and grasping and selfish; if he takes advantage of others; if he has others of opportunity; if he has used them as stepping-stones upon which to climb to his fortune, he is a failure measured by all that constitutes a real man—real values that are worth while.

Easy to Mix This.

What will appear very interesting to many people here is the article taken from a New York daily paper, giving a simple prescription, which is said to be a positive remedy for backache or kidney or bladder derangement, if taken before the stage of Bright's disease:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Shake well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and again at bedtime.

A well known druggist here at home, when asked regarding this prescription, stated that the ingredients are all harmless, and can be obtained at a small cost from any good prescription pharmacy, or the mixture would be put up if asked to do so. He further stated that while this prescription is often prescribed in rheumatic affections with splendid results, he could see no reason why it would not be a splendid remedy for kidney and urinary troubles and backache, as it has a peculiar action upon the kidney structure, cleansing these most important organs and helping them to sift and filter from the blood the foul acids and waste matter which cause sickness and suffering. Those of our readers who suffer can make no mistake in giving it a trial.

hidden by thickets of orange and lemon trees, limes, bananae, sugar apple, pawpaws, mangoes and tropical shrubs.

The houses are all much alike, and the schoolmaster's residence is no exception—four low stone walls topped with a thick roof of thatch, board shutters to the windows instead of glass, no chimneys, with two square rooms inside, a narrow strip of ground smoothed in front to answer for a piazza.

Chat was soon installed in this official residence, with a half grown boy who had been selected to serve him as housekeeper, cook and valet, and with his baggage lying in a confused heap in a corner of the inner room, the corner opposite the hammock. The gentle and simple Palmierians opened their eyes at sight of the big satchels and the dress suit case, the two strapped rugs and the steamer chair, the thick bundle of canes and the other of umbrellas, the leather dressing case, the mackintosh, the three top coats and the four large leather trunks. No schoolmaster had ever arrived with such an outfit before.

It was on the evening of his arrival that Chat first met Mam'selle Celestine. He was sitting out on his hard clay piazza smoking an after supper cigar and enjoying one of the sights for which Palmier is famous. All about among the trees were little fires (for the back yard is the Palmier kitchen), and each fire had its group of people, singing and dancing, some playing the guitar and others five stringed instruments, the mouth organ, the concertina, the flute, the fife or the homemade drum.

In this way every day is ended in Palmier, and the soft air was full of music and moonbeams and the rustling of palm leaves.

As he watched and listened he heard footsteps approaching, and in a moment a young woman appeared in the path. By the light from his open door he saw that she was a beautiful girl of perhaps twenty, with a great quantity of waving black hair fastened up in a Psyche knot on her uncovered head, with rich brown eyes that looked straight into his. She was much better clad than any of the islanders he had seen—in a well fitting gown of black and shoes that were not of island make. But more astonishing still were her fair complexion and her Caucasian mold of feature.

Chat stepped forward to speak, but the young woman anticipated him.

"Good evening, Monsieur Schoolmaster," she said, in a musical voice that gave him a start. "I have come to bid you welcome to Palmier. We have few strangers here, and the people cannot be expected to know how newcomers should be treated. They are kind people, but densely ignorant and superstitious. I hope they have made you comfortable?"

As Chat handed her his chair and reached for another he replied that he had been made exceedingly comfortable.

"I take such an interest in the school," his visitor continued, seating herself with the grace of a child of the tropics, "that I thought it best to come and make your acquaintance at once. My name is Celestine—Mam'selle Celestine, but the people find that too hard to pronounce, and shorten it to Mam. Celestine. And you are Mr. Chatfield? Yes, so I understand from the magistrate. I am glad to meet you, Mr. Chatfield, and you will probably be surprised to hear that it is largely through my agency that you have come here."

"The duce it is!" Chat thought, but he answered politely:

"Indeed! I had no idea that I had such a friend at court."

"Of course not," Celestine replied, "but it is true. The school was not satisfied with the old teacher, and they wanted a new one."

"What a horrid thing to carry in your pocket! I want to see you after school is dismissed, Andrew."

After school he called Andrew up to the front.

"Now, then, Andrew, I want to know what you mean by bringing that rooster's head to school."

Andrew's grandfather had been a Kongo, with three broad silts cut in each cheek. The boy had inherited the fine physique, the coal black skin, the wide brown eyes, full cheeks and thick black lips of his ancestors; perhaps some of their dogged courage, too, for he looked the master squarely in the eye and made no reply. But his big lips protruded till they were a half inch beyond his nose.

"Answer me, sir!"

Still no reply, but farther out went the lips.

"Will you answer?" Chat asked again, and still the boy stood like a block statue. The master raised the desk lid and took out the strap the governor had given him, and with a determined air he began to write on the young Kongo's forehead.

"Oh, mawster, please let me go this time, sah! Please don't lick me, sah! Please don't! Oh, please let me off, sah! I couldn't help it, sah; 'deed, 'deed I couldn't! I had to bring it, sah; I had to do it!" He was less statuesque now.

"Then tell me why you had to bring it," Chat said threateningly.

Instantly the boy resumed his former attitude, with his eyes again fixed upon the schoolmaster, glaring a defiance that plainly said "You can't tell me, but I'll never answer that question."

It was an unpleasant moment for Chat, for nothing would have induced him to strike one of his pupils; yet it seemed necessary to subdue the defiant boy in some way. While he rapidly considered what to do, a faint odor of orange blossoms was wafted into the schoolroom, there was the swirl of a white skirt in the doorway and Mam'selle Celestine was in the aisle.

"My, my, my!" she exclaimed as she advanced toward the teacher's desk. She was smiling and radiant. "Trouble on the first day? Behold the culprit for I am the guilty one, not the boy. It was I gave him the fowl's head to carry. He had to bring it. He could not possibly do anything but obey me. Won't you, please, Mr. Schoolmaster, (and she laid her hand gently upon Chat's arm and looked bewitchingly in his eyes), won't you please let him go this time? He shall not trouble you again."

Glad of any excuse for dismissing the lad, Chat told him to go home, and the next minute he regretted it, when he realized that he had given the defiant Andrew some reason to believe that Mam'selle Celestine's meanness could influence him.

"Forgive me for giving you that little trouble," Celestine said, when the boy had gone. "It was only intended to show the truth of what I have said to you. You remember my telling you

Found Dead.

This is the account given in the Portland papers of Mr. Kelley's death:
The body of James Kelley, 65 years of age, formerly of Norway but of late years a resident of this city, was found lying on the mud flats about 20 feet from the shore of Back Bay, near Tukey bridge, Saturday afternoon. Life had been extinct several hours before the body was discovered. There were no marks of violence or other indication that death was not accidental.

The dead man has a family of a wife and three grown up sons and two daughters in Norway. For reasons unknown he had become estranged from his family. He was in comfortable circumstances. When his clothing was searched, Saturday, $75 were found in his pockets.

When Mr. Kelley came to Portland he purchased an old sloop which lay near the Portland end of Tukey bridge and for a long time he occupied it as a home. Afterwards he lived in one of the shanties along the shore of Back Bay known as the clam diggers' shacks. His business was digging clams and he associated only with the other occupants of the shacks.

It is believed that Kelley was walking along the Marginal Way, when he experienced a dizzy spell and fell into the sluiceway which runs into the Back Bay. The tide was incoming and washed his body up on the mud flats near the shore, where it was left when the water receded.

The Junior Exhibition.

Of The Norway High School.
Norway Opera House was crowded Thursday evening, with our citizens interested in our schools to attend the Annual Junior Exhibition. The stage was set up so it looked neat and attractive. The girls wore light blue, pink and white, and they looked pretty in their quaint frocks, belted with sashes, with their huge girlish looking hair ribbon bows, and their ruffles and flowers. The boys carried themselves with ease and dignity.

Music was by Stearns' Orchestra. The class marched in the hall to the orchestral music under the baton of their leader, Donald Barrows Partridge. The program as printed last week, was successfully handled. The only criticism that could be offered was that some of the near vicinity of the stage, were unable to understand all the good things offered. Still, we remember at one time attending a lecture by that great and good and wise man, Ralph Waldo Emerson, and to this day we have not the least idea of what he said, and if we remember right, he was paid a good sum to deliver that lecture, and the hall was filled with disappointed spectators who paid their money to hear him.

Young people not accustomed to speaking before so large an audience, become more or less frightened, and we have sometimes thought it would be well to have one of the instructors in the back of the hall so the speaker might know that he or she was being distinctly heard.

The greater part of the speakers could be heard any where in the hall, and were thoroughly enjoyed, as they told their stories with much elocutionary ability and dramatic art.

It would not do for us to say who did best, if we could for each speaker was a favorite with his or her friends, and it is right that this should be so. Each member received a "hearty hand."

The Sophomore girls in the Indian Club drill, the Sophomore boys in the Single Stick drill and Partridge and Kimball as "The Politician" and "The Antagonist," simply had to come back. Olivia Libby gave a piano solo and Clara Louise Hathaway, a vocal solo, "My Dream" by Kodney.

Elia Gertrude Clark painted in a word picture a western scene of how a little boy rode to get a Christmas present for a little girl sick at the Gulch, and though set upon by highwaymen and severely wounded, returned to his home with a horse named with the girl's name, covered with gore and honor, and saved the sick girl's life.

Daisy Deane Chase gave part 1st of "The Vision of Sir Launfal" and Mildred Eliza Pottle part 2d. They gave us a vivid insight into the doings of Lowell's knight.

Amy Gladys Hayden gave us a graphic account of the wild horseback ride of Lily Servosse to save the life of her father.

Geneva Whitman Sturtevant told us of the blind flower girl, "Nydia's Sacrifice," from Bulwer-Lytton's "Last Days of Pompeii." How she led her friends from the doomed city to safety, and because of a complication in love with the two friends ended the affair by perishing in the sea.

Dorothy Horr Tubbs told of "The Light on Dead Man's Bar" and she made us see the brave girl in the light-house tower, in the storm and darkness, turning the light all night to save the ships and the sailors on the tempestuous sea.

We rejoiced with her that her labor had not been in vain.

Nobody but a French girl could have given the right ring to "The Soldier of the Empire." Marion Anna LaFrance gave it in a spirited manner, so one could see the movement of the battle.

Gladys Volosta Buck rehearsed Rebecca's Trial for Witchcraft, from a story from Ivanhoe. A story full of intense interest.

Ethel May Brown gave us the "Royal Princess." How she stripped off her jewels to buy bread for the hungry mob who had surrounded the king's castle.

Anna Samantha Frost spoke of the brave "Little Fellow," who stopped a passenger express train by swinging his lighted lantern on the track. Some wreckers had put a large stone on the track to wreck the train.

Pearl Frances Cook gave a dramatic conversational newsboy's story, "The Heart of Old Hickory." It was a talk between the newsboy and the governor. The boy told him how kind the governor had been to his chum, and when this same governor gave him a dollar bill in payment for a paper and told him to keep the change he found out he had been talking to the good governor.

Percy Young Fog told us about "Brisca." How when the great stone was being put on St. Peter's at Rome the ropes began to part, and by putting water on the ropes the stone was got into place. As a reward the furnishing of palms for Easter was granted.

Raymond Edwards Brooks gave a domestic sketch of a scene between husband and wife entitled "He Tried to Tell His Wife." The tone and gesture of both parties were very true to life. The woman had so much talking to do and so many questions to ask that she drove her husband distracted from the stage before she found out the governor.

The political speech of Donald Barrows Partridge in which he tried to set forth the good qualities of his candidate, Judge Wm. F. Jones, was sadly broken in upon by his antagonist, Roland Gerry Kimball, with a list of the good qualities of his candidate, Col. A. J. Stearns. Finally they both took the stump at the same time and place.

LOVELL.

Lovell Concert Band.
Lovell once more has a band and Monday evening, March 1st, they gave a fine concert at Pine Grove hall.

This band started last August and it was their first appearance to the public. And to say the people were surprised would be no dream, as they played in fine shape and with a snap and vigor that showed they had improved their time in practice. They have some 20 members and are under the leadership of E. S. Farrington, as good a band leader as there is in western Maine. As we looked them over we saw only two members of the old band that was the pride of Lovell some years ago. They were E. S. Farrington and C. K. Chapman. All the rest are young men and we hope they will stick to it until we shall have a band in this village second to none in old Oxford county.

There was a large crowd present that enjoyed the concert from start to finish, after which a social dance rounded out an evening well spent for all that are fond of good music.

Bad Hebron Fire.

The old Howe cottage, used as a dormitory by the students, was partially destroyed by fire Saturday afternoon. The loss was over $3,000. Had there been a wind there is little doubt that other buildings on the academy would have caught fire and the whole institution been seriously threatened.

The Howe cottage was erected many years ago and has recently been used as a dormitory for the academy. The place has been in charge of Mrs. Sarah B. Howe, formerly matron of the truste's house, and her sister, Mrs. Jane Barrows, formerly of Boston, who has been confined to her bed. Students who occupied the house were Malcolm O'Brien of Portland, Ware of Waterville, Hoyt of Old Orchard, Elliott of Rumford, Gardner of Bath, Blair of Waterville, Mains of Fort Fairfield, Shackford of Poland, Lawry of Friendship, Brown of Dixfield, Wilson of Brunswick, Tenyok of Tompkins Cove, N. Y., Erskine of Brunswick, Whittey of Friendship and Garcia of San Juan, Porto Rico.

The house is heated with a wood hot air furnace and it is thought that the fire originated from this. The flames were seen to break out in all parts of the building at once. Fire probably started in the basement and burned for some time before the students rushed from the building. Some of them got out easily while others had difficulty. Mrs. Howe and Mrs. Barrows, the latter of whom was ill in bed, was rescued only after the greatest trouble.

As soon as the students rushed from the building, under the leadership of Prof. Gramp of Roxbury, Mass., a teacher in the academy, turned their attention to fighting the flames. Hebron academy has its own fire apparatus, and the students, and soon three strong streams were turned on the fire. The heat had become so fierce and the building so completely enveloped in flames that it was absolutely out of the question to think of saving anything inside. The students, under the leadership of Prof. Gramp of Roxbury, Mass., a teacher in the academy, turned their attention to fighting the flames.

Owing to the suddenness of the fire, the students had no opportunity to save any of their belongings. A great deal of property, money, clothes, furniture and books were lost in the flames. There was an insurance of $5,000 on the building.

WEST SUMMER.

William A. Barrows Corps assisted by the village folk-lore observed the 100th anniversary of Abraham Lincoln by appropriate exercises in the village.

Reading, Lincoln's boyhood. Gladys Young from the doomed city to safety, and because of a complication in love with the two friends ended the affair by perishing in the sea.

Reading, Lincoln's last hours. H. J. Howe singing, "Tenting to night."

A paper of Lincoln's life as a student was read in an impressive manner by Miss H. S. Robertson, closing with Captain, O my captain. After the exercises home-made candies were passed around and a social time was enjoyed by all.

HER PHYSICIAN ADVISED

Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Columbus, Ohio. - "I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during change of life. My doctor told me it was good, and since taking it I feel so much better that I can do all my work again. I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a fine remedy for all women's troubles, and I never forget to tell my friends what it has done for me." - Mrs. E. HANSON, 804 East Long St., Columbus, Ohio.

Another Woman Helped. Granville, Vt. - "I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored my health and strength, and proved worth mountains of gold to me. For the sake of other suffering women I am willing you should publish my letter." - Mrs. CHARLES BARCLAY, R.F.D., Granville, Vt.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.
